

Our evening edition was detained some fifteen minutes yesterday afternoon, owing to some derangement of machinery in our press room.

We are usually first to meet the public demand for news, and seldom fail to furnish the afternoon dispatches in advance of all contemporaries.

NOTICE.—All advertisements, except from yearly advertisers, must be paid for in advance. This rule is imperative from this date.

AS INQUIRY ANSWERED.—WHY THE DEMOCRAT IS STOPPED TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS

A number of letters have reached us within the last few days, complaining of the non-arrival of the Daily Democrat. It is very true it has not arrived to some, as usual, for it was not mailed. Those who make the complaint are persons who have been careless of their accounts, and who, after frequent solicitations in many instances, failing to remit, have been stricken from our books for non-payment.

The plain truth is, that no one hereafter will receive the Democrat one day longer than his subscription is paid for. We cannot depart from this rule. All accounts must be kept in advance, and payments can be made for one month or more at the rate of fifty cents per month, or at five dollars per year, always in advance.

We trust our friends see the propriety of this rule, which will be inflexible hereafter. Those whose accounts stand in arrears will oblige by promptly forwarding the amount of the same.

If any errors have occurred, if names have in any instance been stricken from our books before the expiration of the term paid for, we will gladly correct the error when informed of the fact.

CITY COURT.—Tuesday Morning, May 28. Mary Lewis was before the Court upon the charge of stealing two horses and a slave man from J. N. Hodges, of Barren county. Mr. Hodges was in Court and stated that he thought the woman took the horses for the purpose of making her way to her relatives in Crawfordville, Ind., where her relatives reside. Horses sold, drunk; discharged. Deputy Marshal Henry C. Russell, whose sympathies are always with the needy, went round in the court-room and asked small donations for the benefit of the woman, and in a few minutes raised money enough to pay her way to Crawfordville, Ind., where her relatives reside. Horses sold, drunk; discharged. David Schroed, assaulting George Horatio; dismissed at defendant's cost. Daniel Keif and Ed. Egan, drunk; held in $100 for three months. Joseph Lane, suspected felon; held to bail in $300 for his good behavior for six months. Ed Barnes and George Stoll, drunk and disorderly; gave bail for their good behavior for three months. George Herman and Martin Seaman, assaulting a man whose name we could not learn; continued until to-morrow.

STATE ANNUAL TABACCO FAIR.—This fair, so celebrated in the annals of tobacco sales, occurs this morning. We understand that the competition will be great if not greater, than usual, and the occasion is likely to be one of unusual interest. Whatever may be the result of the exhibition, of one thing we are certain: Messrs. Spratt, Bourn & Co. will give a grand and airy display of their wares. The aggregate value of the goods will exceed $100,000. The Union men, who were represented in the Wheeler Convention, will increase the majority to nearly odd thousand. There is every reason to believe that in other parts of the State a large Union vote has been polled. So far heard from, the Union men are satisfied with a large number of friends, which he had made since his arrival in Virginia, as well as a host of friends which he left in his native State.

Lynchburg Republican, May 21.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMONDS.—The Richmond Enquirer complains that it cannot collect debts due at the North. It says:

Since the 1st of January, the sum due him from the various received from the North into the thousands of dollars due to it in that quarter of the world. Two counterfeits have, however, been sent in during the time named, as payment in full from the two individuals from whom they respectively came.

DRY GOODS REDUCED AGAIN.—A letter from a Tybee volunteer to the Beacon Telegraph says:

I think some of our boys have made an important discovery by bathing in the ocean, viz., the salt water has perfectly cured bad corns on their feet. They say there is no mistake that their corns have disappeared since they have been bathing once a day.

The Fire.—The entire loss by the fire this morning was fully $2,600. The loss to Capt. D. P. Parry, by damage to his residence, is $1,000. The loss to Dr. W. A. B. & Co., carpenters, $200,000, which there was no insurance; to Mr. E. J. Gamble, carpenter, $800; to Mr. John Merrill, in destruction of furniture, &c., $300.

Evening Bulletin.

DRY GOODS REDUCED AGAIN.—A letter from a Tybee volunteer to the Beacon Telegraph says:

I think some of our boys have made an important discovery by bathing in the ocean, viz., the salt water has perfectly cured bad corns on their feet. They say there is no mistake that their corns have disappeared since they have been bathing once a day.

The Fire.—The entire loss by the fire this morning was fully $2,600. The loss to Capt. D. P. Parry, by damage to his residence, is $1,000. The loss to Dr. W. A. B. & Co., carpenters, $200,000, which there was no insurance; to Mr. E. J. Gamble, carpenter, $800; to Mr. John Merrill, in destruction of furniture, &c., $300.

Evening Bulletin.

DRY GOODS REDUCED AGAIN.—A letter from a Tybee volunteer to the Beacon Telegraph says:

I think some of our boys have made an important discovery by bathing in the ocean, viz., the salt water has perfectly cured bad corns on their feet. They say there is no mistake that their corns have disappeared since they have been bathing once a day.

The Fire.—The entire loss by the fire this morning was fully $2,600. The loss to Capt. D. P. Parry, by damage to his residence, is $1,000. The loss to Dr. W. A. B. & Co., carpenters, $200,000, which there was no insurance; to Mr. E. J. Gamble, carpenter, $800; to Mr. John Merrill, in destruction of furniture, &c., $300.

Evening Bulletin.

DRY GOODS REDUCED AGAIN.—A letter from a Tybee volunteer to the Beacon Telegraph says:

I think some of our boys have made an important discovery by bathing in the ocean, viz., the salt water has perfectly cured bad corns on their feet. They say there is no mistake that their corns have disappeared since they have been bathing once a day.

The Fire.—The entire loss by the fire this morning was fully $2,600. The loss to Capt. D. P. Parry, by damage to his residence, is $1,000. The loss to Dr. W. A. B. & Co., carpenters, $200,000, which there was no insurance; to Mr. E. J. Gamble, carpenter, $800; to Mr. John Merrill, in destruction of furniture, &c., $300.

Evening Bulletin.

DRY GOODS REDUCED AGAIN.—A letter from a Tybee volunteer to the Beacon Telegraph says:

I think some of our boys have made an important discovery by bathing in the ocean, viz., the salt water has perfectly cured bad corns on their feet. They say there is no mistake that their corns have disappeared since they have been bathing once a day.

The Fire.—The entire loss by the fire this morning was fully $2,600. The loss to Capt. D. P. Parry, by damage to his residence, is $1,000. The loss to Dr. W. A. B. & Co., carpenters, $200,000, which there was no insurance; to Mr. E. J. Gamble, carpenter, $800; to Mr. John Merrill, in destruction of furniture, &c., $300.

Evening Bulletin.

DRY GOODS REDUCED AGAIN.—A letter from a Tybee volunteer to the Beacon Telegraph says:

I think some of our boys have made an important discovery by bathing in the ocean, viz., the salt water has perfectly cured bad corns on their feet. They say there is no mistake that their corns have disappeared since they have been bathing once a day.

The Fire.—The entire loss by the fire this morning was fully $2,600. The loss to Capt. D. P. Parry, by damage to his residence, is $1,000. The loss to Dr. W. A. B. & Co., carpenters, $200,000, which there was no insurance; to Mr. E. J. Gamble, carpenter, $800; to Mr. John Merrill, in destruction of furniture, &c., $300.

Evening Bulletin.

DRY GOODS REDUCED AGAIN.—A letter from a Tybee volunteer to the Beacon Telegraph says:

I think some of our boys have made an important discovery by bathing in the ocean, viz., the salt water has perfectly cured bad corns on their feet. They say there is no mistake that their corns have disappeared since they have been bathing once a day.

The Fire.—The entire loss by the fire this morning was fully $2,600. The loss to Capt. D. P. Parry, by damage to his residence, is $1,000. The loss to Dr. W. A. B. & Co., carpenters, $200,000, which there was no insurance; to Mr. E. J. Gamble, carpenter, $800; to Mr. John Merrill, in destruction of furniture, &c., $300.

Evening Bulletin.

FATIGUE AND FATIGUE.—We learn from the Times of New York that on last Wednesday, previous to the unusual heat, when the sun was a woman and lady went aboard, and the former engaged a steamer to Cincinnati on her hundredth birthday. The Times adds: "She is a tall, thin, good-looking old lady, appearance, while male冒充者 here the outward resemblance of a gentleman. The boat arrived Tuesday early in the morning, and is now lying at the wharf, having been chartered for the purpose of a pleasure trip. The passengers, one after the other, left the boat, until no one remained but the young woman, who, in the meantime, made frequent and anxious inquiries for her late companion. It was more than she could bear, and she turned about and went back to Louisville, the solitary female becoming an object of curiosity."

At length she too disappeared, and, as she was last seen lingering upon the outer edge of the belles' circle, it was naturally surmised that she had been overboard, and was lost.

AN AMAZON.—Mrs. N. Daniels, six feet two inches high, is a fine looking woman, belonging to the Minnesota regiment. She is bold upon the inspection of the surgeon in discovering her sex, but was recognized by a St. Paul priest, who was shocked, frightened by her threats of vengeance upon him if he exposed her, and he despatched her.

A LIBERTINE KILLED BY A WOMAN.—One of Mrs. Miles.—About nine o'clock, yesterday morning, a tall, thin, dark-haired woman, First Tennessee Regiment, was shot and almost immediately killed, on the Fair Grounds, near this city, by a member of her company named John C. Taylor. From what we learn, Taylor had just reached the camp-ground when the soldier, in his uniform, and in a full dress uniform, was making his rounds, and as he passed near the Librarian, who was the Librarian, he stopped, and when he had advanced toward Taylor, and when he had arrived within a few feet of him, Taylor leveled a single-barrelled pistol at him and fired, the ball which struck the officer in the head, and passing through his brain, caused death in twenty-four hours. The affair created a great deal of excitement in the camp, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the volunteers could be restrained from at once taking the life of Taylor. He, however, was not a man to be trifled with, and the Librarian was compelled to retreat, the Librarian being a very young man, about twenty years of age, and his untimely death is much to be deplored by a large number of friends, which he had made since his arrival in Virginia, as well as a host of friends which he left in his native State.

A LIBERTINE KILLED BY A WOMAN.—One of Mrs. Miles.—About nine o'clock, yesterday morning, a tall, thin, dark-haired woman, First Tennessee Regiment, was shot and almost immediately killed, on the Fair Grounds, near this city, by a member of her company named John C. Taylor. From what we learn, Taylor had just reached the camp-ground when the soldier, in his uniform, and in a full dress uniform, was making his rounds, and as he passed near the Librarian, who was the Librarian, he stopped, and when he had advanced toward Taylor, and when he had arrived within a few feet of him, Taylor leveled a single-barrelled pistol at him and fired, the ball which struck the officer in the head, and passing through his brain, caused death in twenty-four hours. The affair created a great deal of excitement in the camp, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the volunteers could be restrained from at once taking the life of Taylor. He, however, was not a man to be trifled with, and the Librarian was compelled to retreat, the Librarian being a very young man, about twenty years of age, and his untimely death is much to be deplored by a large number of friends, which he had made since his arrival in Virginia, as well as a host of friends which he left in his native State.

A LIBERTINE KILLED BY A WOMAN.—One of Mrs. Miles.—About nine o'clock, yesterday morning, a tall, thin, dark-haired woman, First Tennessee Regiment, was shot and almost immediately killed, on the Fair Grounds, near this city, by a member of her company named John C. Taylor. From what we learn, Taylor had just reached the camp-ground when the soldier, in his uniform, and in a full dress uniform, was making his rounds, and as he passed near the Librarian, who was the Librarian, he stopped, and when he had advanced toward Taylor, and when he had arrived within a few feet of him, Taylor leveled a single-barrelled pistol at him and fired, the ball which struck the officer in the head, and passing through his brain, caused death in twenty-four hours. The affair created a great deal of excitement in the camp, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the volunteers could be restrained from at once taking the life of Taylor. He, however, was not a man to be trifled with, and the Librarian was compelled to retreat, the Librarian being a very young man, about twenty years of age, and his untimely death is much to be deplored by a large number of friends, which he had made since his arrival in Virginia, as well as a host of friends which he left in his native State.

A LIBERTINE KILLED BY A WOMAN.—One of Mrs. Miles.—About nine o'clock, yesterday morning, a tall, thin, dark-haired woman, First Tennessee Regiment, was shot and almost immediately killed, on the Fair Grounds, near this city, by a member of her company named John C. Taylor. From what we learn, Taylor had just reached the camp-ground when the soldier, in his uniform, and in a full dress uniform, was making his rounds, and as he passed near the Librarian, who was the Librarian, he stopped, and when he had advanced toward Taylor, and when he had arrived within a few feet of him, Taylor leveled a single-barrelled pistol at him and fired, the ball which struck the officer in the head, and passing through his brain, caused death in twenty-four hours. The affair created a great deal of excitement in the camp, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the volunteers could be restrained from at once taking the life of Taylor. He, however, was not a man to be trifled with, and the Librarian was compelled to retreat, the Librarian being a very young man, about twenty years of age, and his untimely death is much to be deplored by a large number of friends, which he had made since his arrival in Virginia, as well as a host of friends which he left in his native State.

A LIBERTINE KILLED BY A WOMAN.—One of Mrs. Miles.—About nine o'clock, yesterday morning, a tall, thin, dark-haired woman, First Tennessee Regiment, was shot and almost immediately killed, on the Fair Grounds, near this city, by a member of her company named John C. Taylor. From what we learn, Taylor had just reached the camp-ground when the soldier, in his uniform, and in a full dress uniform, was making his rounds, and as he passed near the Librarian, who was the Librarian, he stopped, and when he had advanced toward Taylor, and when he had arrived within a few feet of him, Taylor leveled a single-barrelled pistol at him and fired, the ball which struck the officer in the head, and passing through his brain, caused death in twenty-four hours. The affair created a great deal of excitement in the camp, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the volunteers could be restrained from at once taking the life of Taylor. He, however, was not a man to be trifled with, and the Librarian was compelled to retreat, the Librarian being a very young man, about twenty years of age, and his untimely death is much to be deplored by a large number of friends, which he had made since his arrival in Virginia, as well as a host of friends which he left in his native State.

A LIBERTINE KILLED BY A WOMAN.—One of Mrs. Miles.—About nine o'clock, yesterday morning, a tall, thin, dark-haired woman, First Tennessee Regiment, was shot and almost immediately killed, on the Fair Grounds, near this city, by a member of her company named John C. Taylor. From what we learn, Taylor had just reached the camp-ground when the soldier, in his uniform, and in a full dress uniform, was making his rounds, and as he passed near the Librarian, who was the Librarian, he stopped, and when he had advanced toward Taylor, and when he had arrived within a few feet of him, Taylor leveled a single-barrelled pistol at him and fired, the ball which struck the officer in the head, and passing through his brain, caused death in twenty-four hours. The affair created a great deal of excitement in the camp, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the volunteers could be restrained from at once taking the life of Taylor. He, however, was not a man to be trifled with, and the Librarian was compelled to retreat, the Librarian being a very young man, about twenty years of age, and his untimely death is much to be deplored by a large number of friends, which he had made since his arrival in Virginia, as well as a host of friends which he left in his native State.

A LIBERTINE KILLED BY A WOMAN.—One of Mrs. Miles.—About nine o'clock, yesterday morning, a tall, thin, dark-haired woman, First Tennessee Regiment, was shot and almost immediately killed, on the Fair Grounds, near this city, by a member of her company named John C. Taylor. From what we learn, Taylor had just reached the camp-ground when the soldier, in his uniform, and in a full dress uniform, was making his rounds, and as he passed near the Librarian, who was the Librarian, he stopped, and when he had advanced toward Taylor, and when he had arrived within a few feet of him, Taylor leveled a single-barrelled pistol at him and fired, the ball which struck the officer in the head, and passing through his brain, caused death in twenty-four hours. The affair created a great deal of excitement in the camp, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the volunteers could be restrained from at once taking the life of Taylor. He, however, was not a man to be trifled with, and the Librarian was compelled to retreat, the Librarian being a very young man, about twenty years of age, and his untimely death is much to be deplored by a large number of friends, which he had made since his arrival in Virginia, as well as a host of friends which he left in his native State.

A LIBERTINE KILLED BY A WOMAN.—One of Mrs. Miles.—About nine o'clock, yesterday morning, a tall, thin, dark-haired woman, First Tennessee Regiment, was shot and almost immediately killed, on the Fair Grounds, near this city, by a member of her company named John C. Taylor. From what we learn, Taylor had just reached the camp-ground when the soldier, in his uniform, and in a full dress uniform, was making his rounds, and as he passed near the Librarian, who was the Librarian, he stopped, and when he had advanced toward Taylor, and when he had arrived within a few feet of him, Taylor leveled a single-barrelled pistol at him and fired, the ball which struck the officer in the head, and passing through his brain, caused death in twenty-four hours. The affair created a great deal of excitement in the camp, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the volunteers could be restrained from at once taking the life of Taylor. He, however, was not a man to be trifled with, and the Librarian was compelled to retreat, the Librarian being a very young man, about twenty years of age, and his untimely death is much to be deplored by a large number of friends, which he had made since his arrival in Virginia, as well as a host of friends which he left in his native State.

A LIBERTINE KILLED BY A WOMAN.—One of Mrs. Miles.—About nine o'clock, yesterday morning, a tall, thin, dark-haired woman, First Tennessee Regiment, was shot and almost immediately killed, on the Fair Grounds, near this city, by a member of her company named John C. Taylor. From what we learn, Taylor had just reached the camp-ground when the soldier, in his uniform, and in a full dress uniform, was making his rounds, and as he passed near the Librarian, who was the Librarian, he stopped, and when he had advanced toward Taylor, and when he had arrived within a few feet of him, Taylor leveled a single-barrelled pistol at him and fired, the ball which struck the officer in the head, and passing through his brain, caused death in twenty-four hours. The affair created a great deal of excitement in the camp, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the volunteers could be restrained from at once taking the life of Taylor. He, however, was not a man to be trifled with, and the Librarian was compelled to retreat, the Librarian being a very young man, about twenty years of age, and his untimely death is much to be deplored by a large number of friends, which he had made since his arrival in Virginia, as well as a host of friends which he left in his native State.

A LIBERTINE KILLED BY A WOMAN.—One of Mrs. Miles.—About nine o'clock, yesterday morning, a tall, thin, dark-haired woman, First Tennessee Regiment, was shot and almost immediately killed, on the Fair Grounds, near this city, by a member of her company named John C. Taylor. From what we learn, Taylor had just reached the camp-ground when the soldier, in his uniform, and in a full dress uniform, was making his rounds, and as he passed near the Librarian, who was the Librarian, he stopped, and when he had advanced toward Taylor, and when he had arrived within a few feet of him, Taylor leveled a single-barrelled pistol at him and fired, the ball which struck the officer in the head, and passing through his brain, caused death in twenty-four hours. The affair created a great deal of excitement in the camp, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the volunteers could be restrained from at once taking the life of Taylor. He, however, was not a man to be trifled with, and the Librarian was compelled to retreat, the Librarian being a very young man, about twenty years of age, and his untimely death is much to be deplored by a large number of friends, which he had made since his arrival in Virginia, as well as a host of friends which he left in his native State.

A LIBERTINE KILLED BY A WOMAN.—One of Mrs. Miles.—About nine o'clock, yesterday morning, a tall, thin, dark-haired woman, First Tennessee Regiment, was shot and almost immediately killed, on the Fair Grounds, near this city, by a member of her company named John C. Taylor. From what we learn, Taylor had just reached the camp-ground when the soldier, in his uniform, and in a full dress uniform, was making his rounds, and as he passed near the Librarian, who was the Librarian, he stopped, and when he had advanced toward Taylor, and when he had arrived within a few feet of him, Taylor leveled a single-barrelled pistol at him and fired, the ball which struck the officer in the head, and passing through his brain, caused death in twenty-four hours. The affair created a great deal of excitement in the camp, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the volunteers could be restrained from at once taking the life of Taylor. He, however, was not a man to be trifled with, and the Librarian was compelled to retreat, the Librarian being a very young man, about twenty years of age, and his untimely death is much

